MANY APPLES HERE

WILL BE A GREAT SOURCE OF INCOME TO FARMERS.

REVENUE WELL DIVIDED

Big Shipments Require Large Number of Men to Handle and All Receive Good Pay.

In this week's Skidmore New Era, D. R. Baker's paper, is the following about the apple industry in that section:

Shippers have been very busy this fall handling the large crop of apples of this vicinity, and almost every available man and many from other places have been pressed into service as pickers and barrelers to take care of the great shipment.

W. M. Howden, the largest apple shipper in Skidmore, has seventy-five men in his employ and is billing out from five to seven cars each day. He has already shipped twenty-eight cars and has some ten or eleven cars on hands now in his big barreling house, and will send out at least seventy-five more cars before he cleans up the stock which he already has in sight.

Lowe and Bridgmon are also big shippers and have had in their employ at this place from eight to fifteen men handling apples ever since fall shipments began. They have sent out up to date sixteen cars, have one or two on hands at this time, and will ship from here at least fifteen cars more.

J. R. Price & Co. have handled a lot of apples also, having been in the business here since the summer and fall trade begun some four months ago. They have had in their employ from three to fifteen men and have shipped up to date about 12 cars, with from one to two now in the apple house, and will send out before they close up at least six cars more from here, besides they have shipped from Graham eight cars and have on hands there now about two cars and will bill out from there later eight to ten cars more.

So you readily see that the apple industry for this section of the country alone, is no small thing. It has furnished work at big wages, wages which are above the average in price, for 100 men for the season, besides bringing into the community thousands of dollars to the apple owners.

The following is a list of cars already shipped out, and an estimated lists on hand and to be shipped out as soon as barreled and cars for shipping can be had. Estimating these cars at 500 bushels each, and they will average more than that, and computing the number of bushels at 40 cents per bushel, you will begin to form some idea of what an apple crop means to this immediate part of the county.

Below will be found a recapitulation of the number of cars shipped and to be shipped:

W. M. Howden—Cars already shipped, 28; cars on hand, 10; cars to be shipped, 75. Total cars, 113.

Lowe & Bridgmon—Cars already shipped, 16; cars on hand, 2; cars to be shipped, 15. Total cars, 33.

J. R. Price, Skidmore—Cars already shipped, 12; cars on hand, 2; cars to be shipped, 6. Total cars, 20.

J. R. Price, Graham—Cars already shipped, 8; cars on hand, 2; cars to be shipped, 8. Total cars, 18.

Grand total shipped and to be shipped—Howden, 113 cars; Lowe & Bridgmon, 37 cars; Price, both places, 34 cars. Grand total, 184 cars.

Estimating this at 500 bushels to the car and at 40 cents per bushel would give the magnificent sum of $36,000 for apples. Now all of this sum will not go into the pockets of a few individuals, and that is the nice part of it, for a great amount of this $36,000 will be paid out for labor and go into the homes of the different 100 men who helped pick and barrel these apples, thus giving it a wider circulation in this part of the community.

Miss Fay Alloway returned to her home, near Arkoe, Friday evening.

MAY CALL PRIMARY

STATE CHAIRMAN IS WILLING FOR EXPRESSION OF OPINION.

NO LAW BEARING ON IT

Three-Cornered Talkfest of Folk, Clark and the Republic May Result in Appeal to the People.

Champ Clark, who was in St. Louis yesterday, in an interview to the Republic of that city, says:

"I am glad Governor Folk agrees to a primary, and we hope the chairman of the Democratic state central committee will call it for Saturday, December 2."

This is Speaker Champ Clark's reply to the challenge of former Governor Folk's political backers, to let the voters of Missouri show their preference between the two for the indorsement for the presidential nomination.

Speaker Clark's declaration for a primary was in reply to a message sent him last night at Shreveport, La., by the Republic, informing him of the proposition of the Folk adherents.

This is Mr. Clark's answer:

"In my Dallas telegram I said that the Democrats of Missouri have a perfect right to choose the delegation to the national convention by a primary election or convention and instruct it for their choice for president, and that they cannot be deprived of that right by any man or any set of men. Glad Governor Folk agrees to primary and hope the chairman of the state committee will call it for Saturday, December 2."

The speaker's message was laid before Joseph B. Shannon, chairman of the state committee, at his home in Kansas City last night. He said he had no objection to calling a primary Monday, December 2 or any other date, provided a majority of the committee agreed, although he knew of no law for such a procedure.

Mr. Shannon, who has expressed his intention of coming to St. Louis to put new life into the city committee, said he would not make his visit before October 31, when the state committee meets in Kansas City.

Adherents of both Joseph W. Folk and Champ Clark yesterday expressed their pleasure at the announcement from Folk's campaign headquarters by Lon Sanders that they would welcome a state primary or any other means of determining beyond all doubt the question of the relative popularity of the presidential possibilities in the state.

Although all of former Governor Folk's friends in St. Louis do not think it should be necessary, in view of the indorsement he received at the platform convention in Jefferson City last year, to submit to such a test of strength, Virgil Rule, one of Folk's strongest friends in St. Louis, yesterday said that, in his opinion, the convention in Jefferson City had no authority to bind the people of Missouri by such an indorsement.

Returned to Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark White, who have been visiting Mrs. White's sister, Mrs. John Herron of East Third street, and her brother, Fred Smith, and family of East Second street, left for their home in Palestine, Texas, Friday evening.

HAD A WOLF HUNT

WILCOX SCENE OF CHASE

Thomas Sparks of Bloomington, Indiana, has had a life-long desire gratified and will take the proof home with him. He has had a desire to see a wolf chase, and when he came out to Missouri on a visit he was rather skeptical and wanted to be shown.

Wolves have become somewhat troublesome recently near Wilcox. They have been catching pigs and otherwise foraging on the farmers, and when Star Carmichael of near Pickering heard of this fact he told his friend from Indiana that he would gratify his wish and show him a real chase. He accordingly organized a crowd composed of himself and Mr. Sparks, John and Frank Surplus Henry Shellman and Dave Sherlock of Parnell and betook themselves over to the residence of Ed Sherlock, one and a half miles south of Wilcox, Friday afternoon. When night came a wolf was started, and at the end of three-quarters of an hour was brought to bay and killed by the dogs after a hard fight.

Mr. Carmichael has numerous wolf scalps to his credit. He is 75 years old and has put an end to scores of the troublesome pests, but he still enters into a chase with the same zeal and enthusiasm manifested in his younger days. The wolf was a large light gray specimen. The skin was brought to Maryville Saturday and turned over to Mr. Sparks, who took it home and will value it highly as a memento of his visit.

HAVE SAME PRICES.

Barber Shops Have Adopted a New Schedule of Prices.

At a meeting held this week of the owners of the eight barber shops in Maryville, a new schedule of prices was adopted and all entered into the agreement of charging the same for barbering work. For some time past four shops have made a reduction in the work, while the other four kept to the same old prices. The barbers decided to get together for their own protection.

Shaves will still be 15 cents, while hair cuts will be 25 cents. Massages were put back to 25 cents. The closing hour will be 7:30 on week nights, while on Saturday it will be 11 o'clock.

Rev. Harrel Returned.

Rev. Lee Harrel, pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, returned Friday night from St. Louis, where he attended the general association of Baptists in Missouri since Monday morning. The meeting was considered the greatest state meeting of Baptists in the history of Missouri.

Returned to Kansas.

Mrs. J. R. Springer and son and daughter of Linwood, Kan., left for their home Saturday morning, after a two weeks' visit with her mother, Mrs. Charles Dempsey. Mr. Springer was also here during the street fair and returned home several days ago.

Baptist Missionary Tea.

The missionary tea given by the Woman's Missionary society of the First Baptist church at the home of Mrs. J. L. Jones on West Second street Friday afternoon was attended by forty-five ladies. An excellent program was given, presided over by the society's president, Mrs. Eugene Ogden. The subject was Russia. Mrs. Harry A. Miller gave an interesting account of Russia and her people, which was followed by a map study of Russia and the work being carried on by the Baptists there, speaking especially of St. Petersburg, Moscow and the Trans-Siberian railway. Mrs. Olney's talk was of unique interest because of the personal interest of the speaker. Mrs. Olney showed photographs of four of her relatives who are or have been well known residents of that country. Her uncle, Mr. Joseph Bouhaye, a brother of her mother, Mrs. Lambertine Gobiet, who died in this city a few years ago, is living in St. Petersburg, a retired officer of the Russian army. His son, Joseph, Jr., was killed during the Japanese-Russian war, while serving in the Russian army. A cousin of Mrs. Olney, Victor Itrelhoss, is the ambassador from Russia to Buenos Ayres. Other numbers on the program were solos by Mrs. H. L. Raines and Mrs. Mae Denny, and recitations by Master Homer Ogden and Little Miss Orrell Anderson. Devotions were led by Mrs. Lee Harrel and Mrs. W. E. Davis led the prayer. Refreshments were served during the social hour. The visitors were Mrs. W. C. Ellison, Mrs. John Herron, Mrs George Lorance, Miss Grace Coleman, Mrs. M. C. Bean of Creston, Ia., and Mrs. M. A. Peery.

Their Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Woodburn, who live thirteen miles northeast of Maryville, in the Harmony neighborhood, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage Friday, October 20, at their home, surrounded by their children, grandchildren and other relatives and friends. All the children were present excepting one son, J. C. Woodburn of Pittsburg, Pa. The celebration was a great surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Woodburn. They were preparing to spend the day quietly at home when a company numbering one hundred suddenly appeared bringing baskets filled with every good thing to eat. A table fifty-four feet long was spread and all enjoyed the feast together. The children present remembered their father and mother with a handsome lounge, and the friends presented Mr. Woodburn a gold-headed cane, and a gold ring to Mrs. Woodburn. The presentation speech was made by Rev. C. R. Green, pastor of Harmony church, in his happiest style. Mr. and Mrs. Woodburn have lived at their present home for thirty-one years, and they enjoy the confidence and esteem of many, many friends. They were married at Middlebourne, W. Va. They have the sincere wishes of all for good health and continued prosperity, also that they may live to celebrate their diamond wedding.

Those present were Mr. John A. Sparks and wife and daughters, Ida

OUT FOR GOOD TIME

BUT IT LANDED TOM DOWELL IN THE JAIL.

DROVE HORSE ALL NIGHT

Sheriff's Office Was Busy Friday Night Trying to Find Him—Misdemeanor is Charge.

Tom Dowell was arrested Saturday morning by Sheriff Tilson and was placed in the county jail. Tom went out for a good time Friday evening and took a livery team of the Tilson livery barn from the hitchracks that had been tied there by George Keefe, who had been out hunting that day, and while he was dividing his game in a building across the street Tom untied the horse and left. After getting a shave at the Yeaman shop, under the Poland-China office, he started out and didn't come back until about 6 o'clock Saturday morning and took the horse and buggy to the barn. Where he drove the horse Tom doesn't know, but it was evident that the horse had traveled all night.

Several parties were out during the night in search of the horse. John Tilson and Clyde Avitt drove over near Parneli, while Sheriff Tilson went out of Maryville. Nothing could be heard of it.

The charge that will be placed against Dowell will be a misdemeanor offense.

CAUGHT HAND IN CIDER MILL.

Mrs. Alex Wells Badly Injured While Visiting Parents.

Mrs. Alex Wells, living ten miles southwest of Maryville, suffered a serious injury to one of her hands Friday afternoon at the home of her father, Hiram Logan near Burlington Junction, where she was visiting in company with her husband and little son. While assisting her husband in making cider, Mrs. Wells caught the fingers of her right hand in the machinery, and before the power could be thrown off the bones of the two middle fingers were crushed and the other fingers seriously hurt. A gasoline engine was the power used in running the cider mill.

Dr. F. M. Ryan of Quitman was called to attend her injuries. Upon his advice Mrs. Wells was taken to St. Joseph Saturday morning by her husband, where she is being cared for at Ensworth hospital. They were met in St. Joseph by Mrs. W. H. Wells of this city, who is Mr. Wells' mother. Dr. Ryan thought Saturday morning that the injured woman's hand might be saved.

MR. FOLK'S CHALLENGE.

With the base ball season rapidly approaching the end all who are inclined to sport will take an interest in Mr. Sanders' implied challenge to Champ Clark on behalf of Governor Folk. He wants the speaker to meet the former governor at Philippi, as it were, and fight out the question of Missouri's Democratic presidential preference at the county conventions and primaries next year. This is a thing that is likely to happen after a fashion, anyway, but why not make it a contest that will be worth while?

Thus far Mr. Clark seems to have maintained the position that while he would not exert himself for the honor he would accept it gratefully if it came to him unsolicited. That was a little too much for the Folk men who already have one indorsement and are willing to fight for another.

These evidences of life and vigor in the Democratic party are very gratifying and we hope to see more of them. We would rather see great Democrats elucidating their principles on the stump in Missouri than delivering Chautauqua lectures possibly to unappreciative audiences far from home. —The Republic.

BRYAN CRITICIZES TAFT.

Declaring that the president is dodging and that he really packed the supreme court in the interest of the trusts, Mr. Bryan says in today's Commoner:

"President Taft: You appointed to the chief justiceship of the supreme court Justice White, who thirteen years ago took the trust's side of the trust question; you appointed him over the head of Justice Harlan, who had served longer and with more distinction, and who had taken the people's side on trust and other questions. Who asked you to give a trust Democrat the preference over an anti-trust Republican? Make public the recommendations, written and verbal, and let the people know the influences that dictate your appointments.

"You appointed Governor Hughes to the supreme bench after he had interpreted your platform to suit the trusts, and he proceeded to join Chief Justice White and carry out your platform promise to amend the anti-trust law by weakening it. Make public the written and verbal recommendations upon which you appointed Justice Hughes and let the people see how many trust magnates united to secure his appointment.

"All the other supreme justices appointed by you took the side of trusts in these decisions. Make public the written and verbal recommendations on which you appointed them and let the public see how completely you have turned our highest court over to the trusts.

"You now say to the trusts, having secured what they want, there shall be no change in the law. Having aided the trusts to make the law to suit them, you now propose to keep the people from amending the law in their interests.

"Please tell the people why anybody but a trust magnate should indorse your position on the trust question.

"A vote to approve President Taft's policies is a vote for the trusts."

IMPERSONATED JESSE RANKIN.

Jim Milligan Cut a Wide Swath for a Short Period.

The Omaha Bee of Saturday had the following:

J. D. Rankin, the real Jesse Rankin of Tarkio, Mo., arrived in Council Bluffs yesterday afternoon for the purpose of securing a timely interview with the young man who has been trailing the family escutcheon in the dust. When Mr. Rankin, at his home in Tarkio, read in the Bee the story printed Tuesday morning announcing the wild escapade of the fellow posing as the grandson of the late David Rankin, one of the men whom the people of Northwestern Missouri have long known and honored, the telephone was immediately used and the Council Bluffs police department informed that the man who married 15-year-old Maude Blumenstine Monday evening and was in jail two hours afterward was Jess or James Milligan, a former resident of Tarkio and well known there. Mr. Rankin took the first train to Council Bluffs, not for the purpose of protecting the family name, but to insure the holding of the imposter until he can be returned to Missouri. As there is a Jess and Jim Milligan, Mr. Rankin was in doubt as to which it might be.

He confronted Milligan in the city jail immediately after reaching the city and told the police it was Jim Milligan. Mr. Rankin, who is a young man of refinement, connected with the largest banking business in that portion of Missouri and married and providing for his family of wife and two children, told briefly of some of the Milligan exploits. He said the boy's father is now in jail at Rockport charged with bootlegging, and that another brother is being sought by the federal authorities for the same offense. He said Milligan went to Kansas City some time ago and engaged a fine livery team and carriage upon the representation that he was J. D. Rankin, drove out of town and sold the outfit. He was next heard from at North Platte, Neb., where he became connected with a valuable fur overcoat, again giving the name of J. D. Rankin. He is also wanted for a crime committed at Springfield, Mo. The sheriff was expected to arrive from Tarkio last night to take Milligan back.

It is now recalled by the police and others that Milligan came to Council Bluffs in July and represented himself as J. D. Rankin. The Rankins are extensive dealers in automobiles, and Milligan came nearly concluding operations for the purchase of a fine car from a Council Bluffs dealer. He was only prevented getting away with it when the garage men sent a chauffeur with him. All he got was a good, free ride about town. It is also recalled that Milligan was around the Goodrich hotel during the afternoon of the evening that James Ganz attempted to line a dozen men in the office and rob them and the cash register, firing half a dozen shots. Milligan was in his company and was drinking with him and is believed now to be largely responsible for the crime of the liquor-crazed man. One of the patrons of the hotel had his pockets picked that evening before Ganz made his wild attempt, and Milligan is believed to be responsible for the loss.

An enormous amount of embarrassment has been caused Mr. Rankin and his family by the persistent impersonation by Milligan. Mr. Rankin said he received a postal card about ten days ago from a strange young woman, directed to Tarkio, in which the young woman said she arrived home safely and thoroughly enjoyed the trip with him, alluding to many incidents of a shady character. Mr. Rankin said Milligan would now be retired for a good long time. The only request that Milligan had to make when he met Rankin at the city jail was for "a good cigar."

Members of Camp No. 2052, M. W. A., are requested to meet at their camp hall October 26th, at 7:30 p. m., and go from there to attend reception by G. A. R. and W. R. C. at Odd Fellows' hall. A. W. HAWKINS, Secretary.

Mrs. Elliott was 78 years old and moved with her husband from Chillicothe, O., to Maitland soon after the close of the civil war. Her husband died seven years ago.

Mrs. Elliott was taken to the hospital two weeks ago last Monday. The body will be taken to Maitland, where funeral services will be held from the Methodist church Sunday. Was a Great Concert.

It is the opinion of our music loving people and critics who attended the concert given by the Ladies' Spanish orchestra in the Business college auditorium Friday night that it was the best program of the kind that has been given in our city. It was the opening number of the Business College Redpath lecture course, and if Friday night's number is a sample of what is coming Maryville people have some fine things coming. The magnificent vocal soloist with the company, Mr. Frederick Irving, was recently with the Pittsburg Festival orchestra. The costumes of the ladies added greatly to the general effect of the program, and the solo numbers by the celloist, the cornetist and the director of the orchestra, who is a fine violinist, were splendid. The work of the entire orchestra is entrancing. Three of the members were members of the Fox Sisters orchestra that appeared here on the Chautauqua program two years ago, the company consisting of the mother and six daughters.

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place" is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that nature needs assistance. It is nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good, reliable hair restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandparents used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of domestic sage and sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur at once and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special agents, Koch Pharmacy.

CHINA FEELS MONEY PANIC

People Are Refusing Best of Paper and Demand Silver.

SEVERAL NATIVE BANKS FAIL

Situation Partly Relieved by Loan of Three Million Dollars—United States Battleship to Shanghai.

Shanghai, Oct. 21.—Despite alarmist rumors, trustworthy information received here is to the effect that all is quiet at Kiu Kiang, Wu Hu, Nanking, Soo Chow and Hang Chow. There has been a large exodus to Shanghai from these places, but reports of impending trouble are almost all traceable to interested Chinese.

The worst feature of the situation is the stringency in money, due to a demand for silver for even the best paper. Several native banks in Shanghai have suspended payments.

A loan of $3,000,000 in currency of Nanking sent to the official banks here has partially relieved the situation, but business is at a standstill and a crisis is threatened unless negotiations are begun by the bankers with the merchant guilds to avert it.

Advices of rebel successes at Hankow caused great jubilation among the Chinese here. Previously they had been downcast.

The run on the banks here has stopped, but the native banks are unable to pay their outstanding checks and business is at a standstill.

Pekin, Oct. 21.—It is apparent here that the imperial government knew the result of the battle at Hankow between its forces and the rebels more than 24 hours before it became public. Reports of the rebel victory gradually leaked out, but the first positive account of the defeat of the imperial troops was delivered to the foreign legations by the news bureaus. It caused a profound impression.

The success of the revolution has been considered here to hinge upon the result of the first encounter, as its moral effect would be far-reaching. When the fugitive imperialists reach the main army, now mobilizing near Sin Yang Chow, knowledge of the repulse, it is believed will utterly demoralize the troops, while as the news travels along the Yang-Tse river it probably will cause important adhesions to the rebel cause.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Rear Admiral Murdock, commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet, cabled to the Navy Department that he was leaving Manila for Shanghai to be nearer the Chinese disturbances. He announced he was leaving on the Rainbow, and that his flagship, the Saratoga, would follow him.

WOMEN IN SALT LAKE POLITICS

Twenty Thousand of Them to Put Their Own Ticket in Field at Primary.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 21.—Twenty thousand women of Salt Lake City will put a ticket of their own in the field at the primary election October 24 to select candidates for municipal offices. The Woman's Welfare League, a nonpartisan organization, has addressed a number of questions to every candidate for office. The replies will guide the league in selecting the candidates it will support.

The questions propounded to candidates demand their attitude toward the enforcement of laws against gambling and vice, but the question which is causing deepest thought among the candidates is as follows:

"Will you voluntarily submit your official record to the recall of the people upon the petition of 20 per cent of the registered voters of this city?"

The league declares they will ask only women to sign such a petition.

Colquitt of Texas extended the welcome and Gov. Sloan of Arizona and Gov. Mills of New Mexico responded and accepted the handsome silk flags, the gift of El Paso.

SOCIALISTS PLAN NEW FARM COLONY

Thirty-Five Acres Purchased Near Independence.

PART OF NATIONAL PROGRAM

Will Make Missouri Town Headquarters of Entire Movement for Similar Settlements all Over Country.

Independence, Mo., Oct. 21.—A cooperative colony of 40 families near here will be started early next spring. Socialists from over all the United States have been during the past week working out the plan for the colony and they have purchased a site of 35 acres on which the colony will be established.

The colony will be called the Fruit Crest Fellowship company. The tract of land purchased is one-half mile north of the city limits. Water mains which supply Independence with water run along the east side of the property and will supply the colony. Electricity also can be obtained and gas will be piped to the tract.

Although the plan is promoted by Socialists and is a part of a national Socialistic program for establishing such colonies near every large city in the United States, it is not only for Socialists but for any person who desires to become a member of a cooperative colony. The colony here will be the headquarters for the national movement.

"The object of the co-operative colony plan," C. B. Hoffman treasurer of the national movement, said, "is to give to anyone who desires a larger freedom and greater independence than he can enjoy in a large city."

The promoters of the plan do not expect the colony to become sufficent unto itself for at least two years, Mr. Hoffman said, but they hope that ultimately the colony will be entirely cooperative and self sustaining. The land purchased will be divided into 40 lots for building purposes, each containing one-third acre. Twelve acres will be used for gardening and an expert agriculturist will be employed to superintend the garden plot the first year.

The promoters estimate that the gardens will average about $500 an acre. All the products will be sold, as much as is needed to the colonists themselves, at market prices, and the money will be divided equally among the 40 lot owners at the end of each year. By the end of the first year, Mr. Hoffman said, they expect to have co-operative dairy, poultry raising cooperatively, and, in fact, every necessity supplied by the colonists themselves on a co-operative basis. Then according to Mr. Hoffman, the colony will have begun to reach the goal that Socialism intends all the colonies to reach.

PANAMA WILL HAVE NAVY YARD

Primarily for Docking and Repairing Merchant Vessels—To be Ready in 1913.

Washington, Oct. 21.—With the aid of his well-trained canal diggers and lock builders it is probable that Col. Goethals is going to break all records in the matter of dry dock construction by building two great docks at Colon and having them completely equipped and ready for the reception of any ships patronizing the Panama canal by the time that waterway is opened in July, 1913. Heretofore it has taken anywhere from three to four years for the government to build a dry dock.

All idea of establishing a great naval station at the Atlantic entrance of the Panama canal has been abandoned and Col. Goethals has now been instructed to build instead a splendid shipyard for docking and repairing vessels of the merchant marine, although, of course, this will also be available for naval uses.

ELY'S DEATH WARNED RODGERS

Waco, Tex., Oct 21.—C. P. Rodgers, learning of the death of Eugene Ely at Macon, Ga., made a minute inspection of his biplane and probably saved himself from death or serious accident for he discovered damage that caused his leaving Waco to be postponed for two hours. The elevator and rudder wires were worn so thin that the aviator doubted their lasting through his proposed flight of 188 miles from Waco to San Antonio. Repair work was begun at once.

Stopped James Boys Films.

Wichita, Kan., Oct. 21.—When an attempt was made at the new Crawford Theater to show motion pictures of the alleged operations of the James boys, W. E. Reeves, city censer and humane officer, objected and when the show management refused to stop the reels, had police officers arrest E. L. Martling, the manager of the theater, and the operator and ticket seller.

MARZYCH CANNOT BE FOUND

OFFICERS ABANDON SEARCH AROUND ELLSWORTH.

Two Suspects Held, But Neither is Believed to be Guilty Man.

Ellsworth, Kan., Oct. 21.—Although two men are detained as suspects in the Showman murder investigation, one being held here and one at Newkirk, Ok., local officers have little confidence that either catch will prove of value. The Newkirk suspect was picked up by a sheriff upon a telegraphic description of Charles Marzyck, the exconvict who is said to have sworn vengeance on the Showman family, and is being sought by officers.

The man held at the county jail here was taken into custody near the Kanopolis salt works. He appeared to be a tramp. Detectives and Sheriff Bradshaw questioned him at length, but he gave them no information of any value, they say. His description does not answer that of Marzyck. If it had he would never have been brought here for interrogation.

Hope that the slayer is still in this county practically was abandoned by Sheriff Bradshaw. Only a few officers are in the surrounding country searching for the murderer. But Showman's brothers and the Vospat family still insist that the slayer is still about, awaiting an opportunity to kill some of them, and they continue their search.

A peculiar feature of the search was that a picture of Marzyck which he gave the murdered Mrs. Showman is being used in an attempt to trace him.

SECOND HYDE TRIAL TO BE BRIEF

Both Sides Are Ready to Begin Monday—No New Witnesses for State.

Kansas City, Oct. 21.—The state will have no new accusers to appear against Dr. B. Clark Hyde when his second trial begins Monday. Virgil Conkling, the county prosecutor, thinks. Only the witnesses who testified at the last trial will be called and the state, hebelieves, will need only one-half the time it took to put in its evidence at the first trial.

Mr. Conkling said every witness for the state was in touch with his office so they can be summoned to Kansas City to testify as soon as they are needed. Miss Pearl Kellar, who again will be the principal accuser of the physician, has been in Kansas City since the first trial.

It is known that the defense will lay more emphasis on the medical side of the case at the coming trial than when Doctor Hyde first was accused before a jury. The findings of the Swope experts will be questioned more closely than before, one of Doctor Hyde's counselors says:

"We're all ready to begin now," Mr. Walsh said. "We expect to push our case right through as expeditiously as possible. The second trial should take only about one-half the time the first hearing did."

Jury Blames Railroad.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 21.—The verdict of the coroner's jury which investigated the wreck of the Missouri Pacific train last Sunday at Fort Crook by which eight lives were lost, rendered at Papillion, Sarpy county, places the responsibility upon the railroad company for not furnishing sufficient safeguards as well as upon the freight train crew for failure to properly inspect the train register at South Omaha.

ARREST PREACHER FOR GIRL'S DEATH

BOUGHT CYANIDE OF POTASSIUM

Minister Was in Bed at Home of Fiance When Taken—The Wedding Invitations Recalled.

Boston, Oct. 21.—The Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson, formerly a student at William Jewell college, Liberty, Mo., was arrested charged with murder in the first degree for the death of Miss Avis Linnell, a pretty music student and choir singer. Miss Linnell died in her room in the Young Women's Christian Association of cyanide of potassium poisoning.

The arrest of the Rev. Mr. Richeson was made at the home of Moses G. Edmands, a wealthy real estate operator, whose daughter, Violet, was to be married to Richeson October 31. The pastor sought a refuge in the Edmands home after the death of Miss Linnell and he has remained there ever since, except for a brief interval. He was in bed when arrested.

The police have information, given to them by William Hahn, a druggist at Newton Centre, who knows the Rev. Mr. Richeson well, that the poison was bought from him by the Rev. Mr. Richeson on October 10, the day before the druggist received an invitation to the coming wedding.

With the Rev. Mr. Richeson under arrest and the purchasing of the poison put up to him to the satisfaction of the police, the detectives renewed their efforts to identify the man with whom Avis Linnell took dinner in the late afternoon or evening of the day she was killed. It is believed that Avis Linnell received the poison from a man friend in the belief that it was a drug that would relieve her of a trouble that had caused her much worry.

Mr. Edmands, the father of Miss Violet Edmands, for whose marriage to Mr. Richeson on October 31 cards had been issued has recalled the invitations. The Edmands family, however, maintains faith in Mr. Richeson.

The setting of October 31 as the date for a further hearing of Mr. Richeson developed a coincidence in the fact that the day is that on which he was to have been married. But neither the announcement of the date nor any other happening in connection with his arrest seemed to disturb the prisoner.

Police learned from a young woman in the Y. W. C. A. that when Mr. Richeson was notified by telephone of Miss Linnell's death he showed little interest, but asked:

"Did Miss Linnell say anything before she died?" The answer was that she did not.

Aerial Scout Work.

As an example of what German military airmen are already able to do, the performance of Lieutenant Mackenthun on Monday is cited. To obtain the same results would have taken a strong force of cavalry four hours.—London Telegraph.

CHAPTER IV.

THE OBSTINATE TEMPLE.

"SEE here, Temple," said Craven, coming windily into the library, waving a sheet of foolscap. "Here's a little statement I've just prepared. Listen."

Burton Temple's brows went together in never so slight a spasm of weariness, but he said cheerfully enough:

"Fire ahead. I'll listen. Only, you see, you've got up so many 'little statements,' Craven."

"Hang it, man," exclaimed the lawyer. "One would think it was a matter of indifference with you whether you were proved innocent of this crime or not. That's one of the reasons public opinion is so against you. You're so apparently unconcerned about the whole affair. Why, you walk along, your head in the air, your chin out, saying to the world, 'Take a punch at it if you can,' and the next thing you'll know they'll beat you down and out."

In the whole ten years during which Craven had been Temple's friend and lawyer this Granger case had been the first matter over which they had differed. But, then, it was the first time that Temple had been personally attacked. He tried now to put this personal equation before his friend.

"You see, dear Craven," he said in explanation for his own apparent indifference, "I appreciate your statement which you wish to inflict on the long suffering public, but don't you think—don't you think it's just the little fact that your friend happens to be the victim of their suspicion which causes all this worry on your part? For example, presuming you were in my place, would you still endeavor to compromise, to explain?"

"Explain to 'em? I'd sooner see 'em"—

"Precisely," laughed Temple, leaning back in his chair—"precisely. You see, I'm right, old friend, and you're wrong. You admit you wouldn't do it yourself in your own case. Clearly and logically, what I must do is to wait till I get some tangible proof of my innocence. What's the use of trying to vindicate myself if the proof's lacking? This New York public is from Missouri, and I don't say a single word till I can make good. Somewhere among Brady's papers, I'll bet my life, there is a letter or a check strip or something. There always is something, and I'm counting on that young detective, Crane, whom I've got in Brady's office, to get it."

"Sure. That's all very well," agreed Craven. "But suppose Crane doesn't get any such proof, what then? Suppose you never do get proof? I tell you, Temple, your so called friends are beginning to disbelieve in you. The papers are offended because you refuse to talk. Now, be reasonable. Here's this little statement which I've prepared to be sent out over your signature." He opened the copy.

"Fire ahead," said Temple indulgently, bending down to pat Cato.

"'To the public,'" began Craven stoutly.

"Donkeyism No. 1," mentally commented the man opposite to him, slowly lighting a cigar.

"'In view of the widespread feeling against me regarding the Gotham Trust company-Granger case I wish to make a statement of the facts'"—

"Savors of a Sunday school appeal for funds for a pink midsummer picnic—eh, Cato?" interposed Temple, adding mentally, "Donkeyism No. 2."

—"'Cornelius Brady and myself are co-trustees of an estate. Mr. Brady wrongfully made use of part of those trust bonds, I by this act becoming equally responsible with him for making up the loss. At the time of the panic Mr. Brady asked the Gotham Trust company to certify a check to the amount of $700,000. This I refused to do, not feeling justified in making the trust company responsible for Brady's check. Thereupon Brady went to Robert Granger, the cashier, and prevailed upon him to certify the check.'"

"Fishy, fishy, fishy!" ejaculated Temple, puffing leisurely at his cigar.

"'Since the trial and conviction of Granger,'" pursued Craven unmovedly "'it has become known that Brady, my co-trustee, used that check to make good his unlawful appropriation of the fund of which he and I are trustees. Naturally it appeared that I profited equally with Brady in the use to which the check was put. It is because of my apparent profit that I am supposed to have given the order to Granger'"—

"Weak—weak as dishwater!" cried Temple, springing up. "Craven, it's no good, I tell you. Caught myself believing myself a thief while you read it. It's futile to explain—hopelessly futile—till we can present some proof that Granger did of his own volition certify that check. Oh, I'll trust in Crane a little longer."

There was silence in the room for a few moments, while Temple smoked, Craven tugged at his gray mustache in a quandary, and Cato slept.

"What did you say?" asked Craven anxiously, looking over his glasses.

"I did not say."

"I want you to. Confound it, you don't take life seriously enough."

"You have perhaps observed that I don't make the mistake of doing so. In some matters I hardly think I am grown up. I am, for example, quite content to remain a boy so far as the muddles of life are concerned, continuing with youthful cheerfulness to translate de profundis clamavi into 'Out of the depths I have clams,' eh, Craven?—just as I did when I held the fort at the foot of the lowest form in Latin."

"You're too pigheadedly brazen in your play with public opinion, that's what you are, my boy," cried Craven hotly. "Public opinion has already convicted you."

"So?" said Temple serenely, lifting his eyebrows in that quizzical way of his. "Public opinion is very absurd. I protest against it. Take one thoroughly ignorant man. Who regards his opinion or considers his judgments as vital? Put together all the thoroughly ignorant men in the republic, and we are told that the sum of their stupidity is to be reverenced, regarded with awe"—

"The voice of the people," broke in Craven, "is"—

"Diaboli!" finished his client. "The public of today has gone mad with a muckrake in its hands; it's too irrationally ready to believe that those in high places"—

Temple's eye had caught the portrait of his mother over the mantel. His mood suddenly veered to downright seriousness.

"Craven, I offered Crane $10,000 to get some tangible proof from Brady's office. But I'd give a million. I'd give every cent I've got to stand clear and be recognized as honest. Why, I tell you, it's hell! I tell you I've worked, worked all my life, worked hard to build up my career on honest, clean lines. You know it. I've turned my back to crooked ways when they were easily accessible, and now—I'm accused of being a thief, the dirtiest sort of a thief, the man who shoulders his crime on another." The muscles of his mouth twitched a bit; he felt his control slipping away, so he turned abruptly on his heel and averted his face.

The grim lawyer crossed over to lay his hand with almost a woman's tenderness on the big shoulder of his friend, and his voice broke with a suspicion of huskiness as he muttered:

When Temple spoke again it was in his customary even tone:

"Craven, it seems to me that if Granger certified that check he didn't do it for mere love. Must have received something in return, eh?"

"Something in return?" said the lawyer dryly. "Sure, and a big something at that. It was worth it."

"What do you suppose he did it with, then?"

The lawyer shrugged his shoulders.

"The papers said he had a wife, I remember. Ever see her?"

"Never did," said Craven laconically.

"Suppose she's extravagant?"

"Superfluous question," grunted Craven. "They all are." Craven was sixty and a bachelor by instinct, one might even say by heredity, for his father had succeeded in escaping matrimony until close upon fifty-two.

Temple smiled indulgently and began elaborating his new idea. "It has occurred to me that if we could establish that Granger has been spending or investing large sums of money lately it would help our cause. That's why I mentioned his wife."

Before he vouchsafed to reply the cynical old lawyer walked across the room and helped himself to a peg of brandy and soda.

"Your premise is all right, Temple," he sneered, "but your conclusion is sappy, asinine. We'll try to find out if he spent money, sure. But we won't waste time in trying to find out if he spent it on his wife. The great trouble with you is that you're romantic."

Temple nodded comprehensively, the odd, quizzical, boyish uplift coming to his eyebrows again notwithstanding.

"Dare say you're right," said he simply.

"Of course it was a noble and high minded supposition on your part," grinned the bachelor, "and, having the marriage germ in your system, it was to be expected. You haven't a wife, so you naturally fancy the money would be spent on one. Granger has a wife. He naturally spends it on somebody else. Each man turns to the thing he doesn't possess."

Temple nodded again. "Well, when you go into town on Monday, get the still hunt started for the woman, will you, old man?"

"Sure, you bet your life. But," he called back over his shoulder, as he was leaving the room, "we won't hunt for her in Westfield, N. J., where Granger's home is; we'll hunt for her in West Forty-third street, New York."

"And this wife of Granger's," murmured Temple, left to himself, "I suppose she has faith in him; they all have. I dare say it's she who's working behind this plan to get his pardon; doubtless she's somewhere now, praying for him, waiting for him to come back to her vindicated, an honest man. And I? Well, I'm fighting to prove his conviction just, and there you are! Queer little muddle it is, after all, this play of life. I wonder sometimes if the great Eye mustn't get tired of it and the great Ear wearied of it. I wonder"—

From the first days of his association with the Gotham Trust company in an inconsequential capacity to the later days when he had risen to its presidency, allies and rivals had found in Burton Temple a personal humility that was charming, but underneath it fighting qualities that were terrible. He had the gentleness of a lamb and the strength of a lion.

Immediately Anna Granger had recognized the second of these qualities. Now, after some weeks of daily work with him, in the gradual unveiling of the man's personality, she was coming to a sense of the first. Her feelings and judgments about her host were beginning to pulse through her mind with an energy that she seemed powerless to arrest. They did not make her happy; far from it, but they quickened and intensified all the acts of thinking and living.

Usually, however, she succeeded in recapturing herself, in beating back the thoughts which, like troops on a doubtful field, appeared to be carrying her into the ambushes and strongholds of an enemy; she was impatient and scornful of them.

As to Temple himself, maybe he didn't know it, but already he was in the way to fall as completely in love with his new secretary as Amadis of Gaul or Aucassin of Beaucaire or any other hero of romance you may choose to mention. Even in the first few days he had found himself thinking more of her in a personal way than he had ever thought of any woman. He was not the fashion of man to whom women in general appealed—not that he was wanting in a certain admiration for them or in reverence, but his early life had been devoted to his mother and to his career, so that during the days when a man usually chooses a wife Temple had been too occupied to seek for one. Later—well, somehow he had not met with any one who had quickened the romance that was in him.

For at heart this cool, collected man of finance was romantic. He was more; he was an idealist. He was the sort of man who would husband to his original mate or none.

Unconsciously he made constant little discoveries in Anna—most charming yields of new regions of intelligence, new points of humor, unexpected fountains of emotion, unfathomable depths of womanliness. Her eyes and her hair pleased him; her slim, firm, delicate hands— No; he repudiated that. It was herself—her inimitable self.

And as he felt the excellencies and beauties of her nature more and more he felt the absorbing power of his own manhood to make them his own. She bloomed for him the flower of fancies, but the seeds lay in his own heart; she seemed an exhalation from his own hidden sources. His mother possessed the same ladyhood. At Anna's age his own mother must have been like her, he thought, the stirrer in a man of noble passions, the allayer of others. Life partnership with such women promised not gratifications merely, but satisfactions.

Life partnership and love! They were thoughts now neither for noon nor her presence. With a man like Burton Temple everything had its time and place. He must clear his good name first. That was the imperative duty on hand.

As the result of the gradual recognition of the state of his own feelings, there had come about increased activity in his work against Granger. The reward to Crane, should he succeed in securing some scrap of evidence from Brady, had been raised to $25,000. The detective bureau had been offered a fabulous sum for proof that Granger had invested any large amount of money; that he had been a big purchaser of stock in any company, or that he was tangled up with some woman besides his wife. No means that a daring, shrewd fighter could use had been overlooked.

And so, all unconsciously—oh, the little pathetic game of human cross purposes at which fate, the flinty hearted, must smile—Anna Granger had become at once her husband's champion and foe. She, for tenderness toward him, was here in Temple's house, fighting desperately to find some evidence that would clear him. Temple, for the vindicated honor which he hoped to lay at his lady's feet, was fighting with equal desperation to keep in prison as a branded thief the man whom he had sent there.

But, as yet, the fight had fetched nothing to either of them.

MANY APPLES HERE

WILL BE A GREAT SOURCE OF INCOME TO FARMERS.

REVENUE WELL DIVIDED

Big Shipments Require Large Number of Men to Handle and All Receive Good Pay.

In this week's Skidmore New Era, D. R. Baker's paper, is the following about the apple industry in that section:

Shippers have been very busy this fall handling the large crop of apples of this vicinity, and almost every available man and many from other places have been pressed into service as pickers and barrelers to take care of the great shipment.

W. M. Howden, the largest apple shipper in Skidmore, has seventy-five men in his employ and is billing out from five to seven cars each day. He has already shipped twenty-eight cars and has some ten or eleven cars on hands now in his big barreling house, and will send out at least seventy-five more cars before he cleans up the stock which he already has in sight.

Lowe and Bridgmon are also big shippers and have had in their employ at this place from eight to fifteen men handling apples ever since fall shipments began. They have sent out up to date sixteen cars, have one or two on hands at this time, and will ship from here at least fifteen cars more.

J. R. Price & Co. have handled a lot of apples also, having been in the business here since the summer and fall trade begun some four months ago. They have had in their employ from three to fifteen men and have shipped up to date about 12 cars, with from one to two now in the apple house, and will send out before they close up at least six cars more from here, besides they have shipped from Graham eight cars and have on hands there now about two cars and will bill out from there later eight to ten cars more.

So you readily see that the apple industry for this section of the country alone, is no small thing. It has furnished work at big wages, wages which are above the average in price, for 100 men for the season, besides bringing into the community thousands of dollars to the apple owners.

The following is a list of cars already shipped out, and an estimated lists on hand and to be shipped out as soon as barreled and cars for shipping can be had. Estimating these cars at 500 bushels each, and they will average more than that, and computing the number of bushels at 40 cents per bushel, you will begin to form some idea of what an apple crop means to this immediate part of the county.

Below will be found a recapitulation of the number of cars shipped and to be shipped:

W. M. Howden—Cars already shipped, 28; cars on hand, 10; cars to be shipped, 75. Total cars, 113.

Lowe & Bridgmon—Cars already shipped, 16; cars on hand, 2; cars to be shipped, 15. Total cars, 33.

J. R. Price, Skidmore—Cars already shipped, 12; cars on hand, 2; cars to be shipped, 6. Total cars, 20.

J. R. Price, Graham—Cars already shipped, 8; cars on hand, 2; cars to be shipped, 8. Total cars, 18.

Grand total shipped and to be shipped—Howden, 113 cars; Lowe & Bridgmon, 37 cars; Price, both places, 34 cars. Grand total, 184 cars.

Estimating this at 500 bushels to the car and at 40 cents per bushel would give the magnificent sum of $36,000 for apples. Now all of this sum will not go into the pockets of a few individuals, and that is the nice part of it, for a great amount of this $36,000 will be paid out for labor and go into the homes of the different 100 men who helped pick and barrel these apples, thus giving it a wider circulation in this part of the community.

Miss Fay Alloway returned to her home, near Arkoe, Friday evening.

MAY CALL PRIMARY

NO LAW BEARING ON IT

Three-Cornered Talkfest of Folk, Clark and the Republic May Result in Appeal to the People.

Champ Clark, who was in St. Louis yesterday, in an interview to the Republic of that city, says:

"I am glad Governor Folk agrees to a primary, and we hope the chairman of the Democratic state central committee will call it for Saturday, December 2."

This is Speaker Champ Clark's reply to the challenge of former Governor Folk's political backers, to let the voters of Missouri show their preference between the two for the indorsement for the presidential nomination.

Speaker Clark's declaration for a primary was in reply to a message sent him last night at Shreveport, La., by the Republic, informing him of the proposition of the Folk adherents.

This is Mr. Clark's answer:

"In my Dallas telegram I said that the Democrats of Missouri have a perfect right to choose the delegation to the national convention by a primary election or convention and instruct it for their choice for president, and that they cannot be deprived of that right by any man or any set of men. Glad Governor Folk agrees to primary and hope the chairman of the state committee will call it for Saturday, December 2."

The speaker's message was laid before Joseph B. Shannon, chairman of the state committee, at his home in Kansas City last night. He said he had no objection to calling a primary Monday, December 2 or any other date, provided a majority of the committee agreed, although he knew of no law for such a procedure.

Mr. Shannon, who has expressed his intention of coming to St. Louis to put new life into the city committee, said he would not make his visit before October 31, when the state committee meets in Kansas City.

Adherents of both Joseph W. Folk and Champ Clark yesterday expressed their pleasure at the announcement from Folk's campaign headquarters by Lon Sanders that they would welcome a state primary or any other means of determining beyond all doubt the question of the relative popularity of the presidential possibilities in the state.

Although all of former Governor Folk's friends in St. Louis do not think it should be necessary, in view of the indorsement he received at the platform convention in Jefferson City last year, to submit to such a test of strength, Virgil Rule, one of Folk's strongest friends in St. Louis, yesterday said that, in his opinion, the convention in Jefferson City had no authority to bind the people of Missouri by such an indorsement.

Returned to Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark White, who have been visiting Mrs. White's sister, Mrs. John Herron of East Third street, and her brother, Fred Smith, and family of East Second street, left for their home in Palestine, Texas, Friday evening.

WILCOX SCENE OF CHASE

Thomas Sparks of Bloomington, Indiana, has had a life-long desire gratified and will take the proof home with him. He has had a desire to see a wolf chase, and when he came out to Missouri on a visit he was rather skeptical and wanted to be shown.

Wolves have become somewhat troublesome recently near Wilcox. They have been catching pigs and otherwise foraging on the farmers, and when Star Carmichael of near Pickering heard of this fact he told his friend from Indiana that he would gratify his wish and show him a real chase. He accordingly organized a crowd composed of himself and Mr. Sparks, John and Frank Surplus Henry Shellman and Dave Sherlock of Parnell and betook themselves over to the residence of Ed Sherlock, one and a half miles south of Wilcox, Friday afternoon. When night came a wolf was started, and at the end of three-quarters of an hour was brought to bay and killed by the dogs after a hard fight.

Mr. Carmichael has numerous wolf scalps to his credit. He is 75 years old and has put an end to scores of the troublesome pests, but he still enters into a chase with the same zeal and enthusiasm manifested in his younger days. The wolf was a large light gray specimen. The skin was brought to Maryville Saturday and turned over to Mr. Sparks, who took it home and will value it highly as a memento of his visit.

HAVE SAME PRICES.

Barber Shops Have Adopted a New Schedule of Prices.

At a meeting held this week of the owners of the eight barber shops in Maryville, a new schedule of prices was adopted and all entered into the agreement of charging the same for barbering work. For some time past four shops have made a reduction in the work, while the other four kept to the same old prices. The barbers decided to get together for their own protection.

Shaves will still be 15 cents, while hair cuts will be 25 cents. Massages were put back to 25 cents. The closing hour will be 7:30 on week nights, while on Saturday it will be 11 o'clock.

Rev. Harrel Returned.

Rev. Lee Harrel, pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, returned Friday night from St. Louis, where he attended the general association of Baptists in Missouri since Monday morning. The meeting was considered the greatest state meeting of Baptists in the history of Missouri.

Returned to Kansas.

Mrs. J. R. Springer and son and daughter of Linwood, Kan., left for their home Saturday morning, after a two weeks' visit with her mother, Mrs. Charles Dempsey. Mr. Springer was also here during the street fair and returned home several days ago.

News of Society and Womens' Clubs

Entertained Spanish Orchestra.

At the close of the concert given by the Ladies' Spanish Orchestra in the Business College auditorium Friday night, the members of the company were entertained by Miss Alma Nash, director of the Ladies' Military band of Maryville, at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Nash. Before the serving of refreshments the Spanish orchestra's soloist, Mr. Frederick Irving, gave several vocal numbers, and the hour was delightfully spent. The members of the Spanish orchestra are: Olivia Fox violinist, director; Coletta Fox, clarinet and viola; Sylvania Fox, violin, drums and traps; Anna Smith, pianist; Frances Parkerson, cello; Helen Barnard, cornet; Marie Hall, flute; Frederick Irving, soloist. Baptist Missionary Tea.

The missionary tea given by the Woman's Missionary society of the First Baptist church at the home of Mrs. J. L. Jones on West Second street Friday afternoon was attended by forty-five ladies. An excellent program was given, presided over by the society's president, Mrs. Eugene Ogden. The subject was Russia. Mrs. Harry A. Miller gave an interesting account of Russia and her people, which was followed by a map study of Russia and the work being carried on by the Baptists there, speaking especially of St. Petersburg, Moscow and the Trans-Siberian railway. Mrs. Olney's talk was of unique interest because of the personal interest of the speaker. Mrs. Olney showed photographs of four of her relatives who are or have been well known residents of that country. Her uncle, Mr. Joseph Bouhaye, a brother of her mother, Mrs. Lambertine Gobiet, who died in this city a few years ago, is living in St. Petersburg, a retired officer of the Russian army. His son, Joseph, Jr., was killed during the Japanese-Russian war, while serving in the Russian army. A cousin of Mrs. Olney, Victor Itrelhoss, is the ambassador from Russia to Buenos Ayres. Other numbers on the program were solos by Mrs. H. L. Raines and Mrs. Mae Denny, and recitations by Master Homer Ogden and Little Miss Orrell Anderson. Devotions were led by Mrs. Lee Harrel and Mrs. W. E. Davis led the prayer. Refreshments were served during the social hour. The visitors were Mrs. W. C. Ellison, Mrs. John Herron, Mrs George Lorance, Miss Grace Coleman, Mrs. M. C. Bean of Creston, Ia., and Mrs. M. A. Peery.

Their Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Woodburn, who live thirteen miles northeast of Maryville, in the Harmony neighborhood, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage Friday, October 20, at their home, surrounded by their children, grandchildren and other relatives and friends. All the children were present excepting one son, J. C. Woodburn of Pittsburg, Pa. The celebration was a great surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Woodburn. They were preparing to spend the day quietly at home when a company numbering one hundred suddenly appeared bringing baskets filled with every good thing to eat. A table fifty-four feet long was spread and all enjoyed the feast together. The children present remembered their father and mother with a handsome lounge, and the friends presented Mr. Woodburn a gold-headed cane, and a gold ring to Mrs. Woodburn. The presentation speech was made by Rev. C. R. Green, pastor of Harmony church, in his happiest style. Mr. and Mrs. Woodburn have lived at their present home for thirty-one years, and they enjoy the confidence and esteem of many, many friends. They were married at Middlebourne, W. Va. They have the sincere wishes of all for good health and continued prosperity, also that they may live to celebrate their diamond wedding.

Those present were Mr. John A. Sparks and wife and daughters, Iva

OUT FOR GOOD TIME

BUT IT LANDED TOM DOWELL IN THE JAIL.

DROVE HORSE ALL NIGHT

Sheriff's Office Was Busy Friday Night Trying to Find Him—Misdemeanor is Charge.

Tom Dowell was arrested Saturday morning by Sheriff Tilson and was placed in the county jail. Tom went out for a good time Friday evening and took a livery team of the Tilson livery barn from the hitchracks that had been tied there by George Keefe, who had been out hunting that day, and while he was dividing his game in a building across the street Tom untied the horse and left. After getting a shave at the Yeaman shop, under the Poland-China office, he started out and didn't come back until about 6 o'clock Saturday morning and took the horse and buggy to the barn. Where he drove the horse Tom doesn't know, but it was evident that the horse had traveled all night.

Several parties were out during the night in search of the horse. John Tilson and Clyde Avitt drove over near Parnell, while Sheriff Tilson went out of Maryville. Nothing could be heard of it.

The charge that will be placed against Dowell will be a misdemeanor offense.

CAUGHT HAND IN CIDER MILL.

Mrs. Alex Wells Badly Injured While Visiting Parents.

Mrs. Alex Wells, living ten miles southwest of Maryville, suffered a serious injury to one of her hands Friday afternoon at the home of her father, Hiram Logan near Burlington Junction, where she was visiting in company with her husband and little son. While assisting her husband in making cider, Mrs. Wells caught the fingers of her right hand in the machinery, and before the power could be thrown off the bones of the two middle fingers were crushed and the other fingers seriously hurt. A gasoline engine was the power used in running the cider mill.

Dr. F. M. Ryan of Quitman was called to attend her injuries. Upon his advice Mrs. Wells was taken to St. Joseph Saturday morning by her husband, where she is being cared for at Ensworth hospital. They were met in St. Joseph by Mrs. W. H. Wells of this city, who is Mr. Wells' mother. Dr. Ryan thought Saturday morning that the injured woman's hand might be saved.

MR. FOLK'S CHALLENGE.

With the base ball season rapidly approaching the end all who are inclined to sport will take an interest in Mr. Sanders' implied challenge to Champ Clark on behalf of Governor Folk. He wants the speaker to meet the former governor at Philippi, as it were, and fight out the question of Missouri's Democratic presidential preference at the county conventions and primaries next year. This is a thing that is likely to happen after a fashion, anyway, but why not make it a contest that will be worth while?

Thus far Mr. Clark seems to have maintained the position that while he would not exert himself for the honor he would accept it gratefully if it came to him unsolicited. That was a little too much for the Folk men who already have one indorsement and are willing to fight for another.

These evidences of life and vigor in the Democratic party are very gratifying and we hope to see more of them. We would rather see great Democrats elucidating their principles on the stump in Missouri than delivering Chautauqua lectures possibly to unappreciative audiences far from home. —The Republic.

BRYAN CRITICIZES TAFT.

Declaring that the president is dodging and that he really packed the supreme court in the interest of the trusts, Mr. Bryan says in today's Commoner:

"President Taft: You appointed to the chief justiceship of the supreme court Justice White, who thirteen years ago took the trust's side of the trust question; you appointed him over the head of Justice Harlan, who had served longer and with more distinction, and who had taken the people's side on trust and other questions. Who asked you to give a trust Democrat the preference over an anti-trust Republican? Make public the recommendations, written and verbal, and let the people know the influences that dictate your appointments.

"You appointed Governor Hughes to the supreme bench after he had interpreted your platform to suit the trusts, and he proceeded to join Chief Justice White and carry out your platform promise to amend the anti-trust law by weakening it. Make public the written and verbal recommendations upon which you appointed Justice Hughes and let the people see how many trust magnates united to secure his appointment.

"All the other supreme justices appointed by you took the side of trusts in these decisions. Make public the written and verbal recommendations on which you appointed them and let the public see how completely you have turned our highest court over to the trusts.

"You now say to the trusts, having secured what they want, there shall be no change in the law. Having aided the trusts to make the law to suit them, you now propose to keep the people from amending the law in their interests.

"Please tell the people why anybody but a trust magnate should indorse your position on the trust question.

"A vote to approve President Taft's policies is a vote for the trusts."

IMPERSONATED JESSE RANKIN.

Jim Milligan Cut a Wide Swath for a Short Period.

The Omaha Bee of Saturday had the following:

J. D. Rankin, the real Jesse Rankin of Tarkio, Mo., arrived in Council Bluffs yesterday afternoon for the purpose of securing a timely interview with the young man who has been trailing the family escutcheon in the dust. When Mr. Rankin, at his home in Tarkio, read in the Bee the story printed Tuesday morning announcing the wild escapade of the fellow posing as the grandson of the late David Rankin, one of the men whom the people of Northwestern Missouri have long known and honored, the telephone was immediately used and the Council Bluffs police department informed that the man who married 15-year-old Maude Blumenstine Monday evening and was in jail two hours afterward was Jess or James Milligan, a former resident of Tarkio and well known there. Mr. Rankin took the first train to Council Bluffs, not for the purpose of protecting the family name, but to insure the holding of the imposter until he can be returned to Missouri. As there is a Jess and Jim Milligan, Mr. Rankin was in doubt as to which it might be.

He confronted Milligan in the city jail immediately after reaching the city and told the police it was Jim Milligan. Mr. Rankin, who is a young man of refinement, connected with the largest banking business in that portion of Missouri and married and providing for his family of wife and two children, told briefly of some of the Milligan exploits. He said the boy's father is now in jail at Rockport charged with bootlegging, and that another brother is being sought by the federal authorities for the same offense. He said Milligan went to Kansas City some time ago and engaged a fine livery team and carriage upon the representation that he was J. D. Rankin, drove out of town and sold the outfit. He was next heard from at North Platte, Neb., where he became connected with a valuable fur overcoat, again giving the name of J. D. Rankin. He is also wanted for a crime committed at Springfield, Mo. The sheriff was expected to arrive from Tarkio last night to take Milligan back.

It is now recalled by the police and others that Milligan came to Council Bluffs in July and represented himself as J. D. Rankin. The Rankins are extensive dealers in automobiles, and Milligan came nearly concluding operations for the purchase of a fine car from a Council Bluffs dealer. He was only prevented getting away with it when the garage men sent a chauffeur with him. All he got was a good, free ride about town. It is also recalled that Milligan was around the Goodrich hotel during the afternoon of the evening that James Ganz attempted to line a dozen men in the office and rob them and the cash register, firing half a dozen shots. Milligan was in his company and was drinking with him and is believed now to be largely responsible for the crime of the liquor-crazed man. One of the patrons of the hotel had his pockets picked that evening before Ganz made his wild attempt, and Milligan is believed to be responsible for the loss.

An enormous amount of embarrassment has been caused Mr. Rankin and his family by the persistent impersonation by Milligan. Mr. Rankin said he received a postal card about ten days ago from a strange young woman, directed to Tarkio, in which the young woman said she arrived home safely and thoroughly enjoyed the trip with him, alluding to many incidents of a shady character. Mr. Rankin said Milligan would now be retired for a good long time. The only request that Milligan had to make when he met Rankin at the city jail was for "a good cigar."

Members of Camp No. 2052, M. W. A., are requested to meet at their camp hall October 26th, at 7:30 p. m., and go from there to attend reception by G. A. R. and W. R. C. at Odd Fellows' hall. A. W. HAWKINS, Secretary.

MRS. ELLIOTT DEAD.

Widow of Maitland Man Dies in St. Joseph Hospital.

Mrs. Caroline Elliott, widow of the late Thomas Elliott, of Maitland, died at 4:30 o'clock Friday afternoon at a hospital in St. Joseph, following an operation for cancer. Mrs. Elliott was 78 years old and moved with her husband from Chillicothe, O., to Maitland soon after the close of the civil war. Her husband died seven years ago.

Mrs. Elliott was taken to the hospital two weeks ago last Monday. The body will be taken to Maitland, where funeral services will be held from the Methodist church Sunday. Mrs. Elliott is survived by the following children: Mrs. Emma Blazer of Maitland, Mrs. Rose Riley of St. Joseph, Mrs. Maud Metzger of Council Bluffs, Ia.; Zach Elliott of Portland, Ore., captain of fire company No. 3 of that city; Oren Elliott, editor of the Silent Review, Lexington, Mo.; Mrs. Inez Wakeley of Graham, Mrs. Ethel Gallagher of Maitland, and Carroll Elliott of Graham. All of her children and one grandson, George Smock of Lincoln, Neb., were at her side when she died.

Mrs. Elliott was reputed to be wealthy. She came from the noted Rozelle family of Chillicothe, O., where her father was an extensive woolen manufacturer.

Was a Great Concert.

It is the opinion of our music loving people and critics who attended the concert given by the Ladies' Spanish orchestra in the Business college auditorium Friday night that it was the best program of the kind that has been given in our city. It was the opening number of the Business College Redpath lecture course, and if Friday night's number is a sample of what is coming Maryville people have some fine things coming. The magnificent vocal soloist with the company, Mr. Frederick Irving, was recently with the Pittsburg Festival orchestra. The costumes of the ladies added greatly to the general effect of the program, and the solo numbers by the celloist, the cornetist and the director of the orchestra, who is a fine violinist, were splendid. The work of the entire orchestra is entrancing. Three of the members were members of the Fox Sisters orchestra that appeared here on the Chautauqua program two years ago, the company consisting of the mother and six daughters.

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place" is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that nature needs assistance. It is nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good, reliable hair restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandparents used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of domestic sage and sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur at once and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special agents, Koch Pharmacy.

All But That.

CHINA FEELS MONEY PANIC

People Are Refusing Best of Paper and Demand Silver.

SEVERAL NATIVE BANKS FAIL

Situation Partly Relieved by Loan of Three Million Dollars—United States Battleship to Shanghai.

Shanghai, Oct. 21.—Despite alarmist rumors, trustworthy information received here is to the effect that all is quiet at Kiu Kiang, Wu Hu, Nanking, Soo Chow and Hang Chow. There has been a large exodus to Shanghai from these places, but reports of impending trouble are almost all traceable to interested Chinese.

The worst feature of the situation is the stringency in money, due to a demand for silver for even the best paper. Several native banks in Shanghai have suspended payments.

A loan of $3,000,000 in currency of Nanking sent to the official banks here has partially relieved the situation, but business is at a standstill and a crisis is threatened unless negotiations are begun by the bankers with the merchant guilds to avert it.

Advices of rebel successes at Hankow caused great jubilation among the Chinese here. Previously they had been downcast.

The run on the banks here has stopped, but the native banks are unable to pay their outstanding checks and business is at a standstill.

Pekin, Oct. 21.—It is apparent here that the imperial government knew the result of the battle at Hankow between its forces and the rebels more than 24 hours before it became public. Reports of the rebel victory gradually leaked out, but the first positive account of the defeat of the imperial troops was delivered to the foreign legations by the news bureaus. It caused a profound impression.

The success of the revolution has been considered here to hinge upon the result of the first encounter, as its moral effect would be far-reaching. When the fugitive imperialists reach the main army, now mobilizing near Sin Yang Chow, knowledge of the repulse, it is believed will utterly demoralize the troops, while as the news travels along the Yang-Tse river it probably will cause important adhesions to the rebel cause.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Rear Admiral Murdock, commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet, cabled to the Navy Department that he was leaving Manila for Shanghai to be nearer the Chinese disturbances. He announced he was leaving on the Rainbow, and that his flagship, the Saratoga, would follow him.

WOMEN IN SALT LAKE POLITICS

Twenty Thousand of Them to Put Their Own Ticket in Field at Primary.

Salt Lake City, Oct. 21.—Twenty thousand women of Salt Lake City will put a ticket of their own in the field at the primary election October 24 to select candidates for municipal offices. The Woman's Welfare League, a nonpartisan organization, has addressed a number of questions to every candidate for office. The replies will guide the league in selecting the candidates it will support.

The questions propounded to candidates demand their attitude toward the enforcement of laws against gambling and vice, but the question which is causing deepest thought among the candidates is as follows:

"Will you voluntarily submit your official record to the recall of the people upon the petition of 20 per cent of the registered voters of this city?"

The league declares they will ask only women to sign such a petition.

Welcomed New States.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 21.—A military parade and formal exercises of welcome to Arizona and New Mexico were features of El Paso's statehood jubilee. The formal ceremonies were held at Fort Bliss. Gov. Colquitt of Texas extended the welcome and Gov. Sloan of Arizona and Gov. Mills of New Mexico responded and accepted the handsome silk flags, the gift of El Paso.

Journalism Student Injured.

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 21.—Rex B. Magee, a sophomore in the school of journalism of the University of Missouri, was dangerously injured at the gymnasium here. He fell while sliding down a brass pole from the first floor to the basement of the building and suffered a fractured skull.

Third Pellagra Victim.

Iola, Kan., Oct. 21.—Iola's third victim of pellagra was taken to the hospital. The disease has advanced to a dangerous stage. Members of the local medical association are studying the malady and will endeavor to discover a cure.

SOCIALISTS PLAN NEW FARM COLONY

Thirty-Five Acres Purchased Near Independence.

PART OF NATIONAL PROGRAM

Will Make Missouri Town Headquarters of Entire Movement for Similar Settlements all Over Country.

Independence, Mo., Oct. 21.—A co-operative colony of 40 families near here will be started early next spring. Socialists from over all the United States have been during the past week working out the plan for the colony and they have purchased a site of 35 acres on which the colony will be established.

The colony will be called the Fruit Crest Fellowship company. The tract of land purchased is one-half mile north of the city limits. Water mains which supply Independence with water run along the east side of the property and will supply the colony. Electricity also can be obtained and gas will be piped to the tract.

Although the plan is promoted by Socialists and is a part of a national Socialistic program for establishing such colonies near every large city in the United States, it is not only for Socialists but for any person who desires to become a member of a co-operative colony. The colony here will be the headquarters for the national movement.

"The object of the co-operative colony plan," C. B. Hoffman treasurer of the national movement, said, "is to give to anyone who desires a larger freedom and greater independence than he can enjoy in a large city."

The promoters of the plan do not expect the colony to become sufficent unto itself for at least two years, Mr. Hoffman said, but they hope that ultimately the colony will be entirely co-operative and self sustaining. The land purchased will be divided into 40 lots for building purposes, each containing one-third acre. Twelve acres will be used for gardening and an expert agriculturist will be employed to superintend the garden plot the first year.

The promoters estimate that the gardens will average about $500 an acre. All the products will be sold, as much as is needed to the colonists themselves, at market prices, and the money will be divided equally among the 40 lot owners at the end of each year. By the end of the first year, Mr. Hoffman said, they expect to have co-operative dairy, poultry raising co-operatively, and, in fact, every necessity supplied by the colonists themselves on a co-operative basis. Then according to Mr. Hoffman, the colony will have begun to reach the goal that Socialism intends all the colonies to reach.

PANAMA WILL HAVE NAVY YARD

Primarily for Docking and Repairing Merchant Vessels—To be Ready in 1913.

Washington, Oct. 21.—With the aid of his well-trained canal diggers and lock builders it is probable that Col. Goethals is going to break all records in the matter of dry dock construction by building two great docks at Colon and having them completely equipped and ready for the reception of any ships patronizing the Panama canal by the time that waterway is opened in July, 1913. Heretofore it has taken anywhere from three to four years for the government to build a dry dock.

All idea of establishing a great naval station at the Atlantic entrance of the Panama canal has been abandoned and Col. Goethals has now been instructed to build instead a splendid shipyard for docking and repairing vessels of the merchant marine, although, of course, this will also be available for naval uses.

ELY'S DEATH WARNED RODGERS

Waco, Tex., Oct 21.—C. P. Rodgers, learning of the death of Eugene Ely at Macon, Ga., made a minute inspection of his biplane and probably saved himself from death or serious accident for he discovered damage that caused his leaving Waco to be postponed for two hours. The elevator and rudder wires were worn so thin that the aviator doubted their lasting through his proposed flight of 188 miles from Waco to San Antonio. Repair work was begun at once.

Stopped James Boys Films.

Wichita, Kan., Oct. 21.—When an attempt was made at the new Crawford Theater to show motion pictures of the alleged operations of the James boys, W. E. Reeves, city censor and humane officer, objected and when the show management refused to stop the reels, had police officers arrest E. L. Martling, the manager of the theater, and the operator and ticket seller.

MARZYCH CANNOT BE FOUND

OFFICERS ABANDON SEARCH AROUND ELLSWORTH.

Two Suspects Held, But Neither is Believed to be Guilty Man.

Ellsworth, Kan., Oct. 21.—Although two men are detained as suspects in the Showman murder investigation, one being held here and one at Newkirk, Ok., local officers have little confidence that either catch will prove of value. The Newkirk suspect was picked up by a sheriff upon a telegraphic description of Charles Marzyck, the exconvict who is said to have sworn vengeance on the Showman family, and is being sought by officers.

The man held at the county jail here was taken into custody near the Kanopolis salt works. He appeared to be a tramp. Detectives and Sheriff Bradshaw questioned him at length, but he gave them no information of any value, they say. His description does not answer that of Marzyck. If it had he would never have been brought here for interrogation.

Hope that the slayer is still in this county practically was abandoned by Sheriff Bradshaw. Only a few officers are in the surrounding country searching for the murderer. But Showman's brothers and the Vospat family still insist that the slayer is still about, awaiting an opportunity to kill some of them, and they continue their search.

A peculiar feature of the search was that a picture of Marzyck which he gave the murdered Mrs. Showman is being used in an attempt to trace him.

SECOND HYDE TRIAL TO BE BRIEF

Both Sides Are Ready to Begin Monday—No New Witnesses for State.

Kansas City, Oct. 21.—The state will have no new accusers to appear against Dr. B. Clark Hyde when his second trial begins Monday. Virgil Conkling, the county prosecutor, thinks. Only the witnesses who testified at the last trial will be called and the state, hebelieves, will need only one-half the time it took to put in its evidence at the first trial.

Mr. Conkling said every witness for the state was in touch with his office so they can be summoned to Kansas City to testify as soon as they are needed. Miss Pearl Kellar, who again will be the principal accuser of the physician, has been in Kansas City since the first trial.

It is known that the defense will lay more emphasis on the medical side of the case at the coming trial than when Doctor Hyde first was accused before a jury. The findings of the Swope experts will be questioned more closely than before, one of Doctor Hyde's counselors says:

"We're all ready to begin now," Mr. Walsh said. "We expect to push our case right through as expeditiously as possible. The second trial should take only about one-half the time the first hearing did."

Jury Blames Railroad.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 21.—The verdict of the coroner's jury which investigated the wreck of the Missouri Pacific train last Sunday at Fort Crook by which eight lives were lost, rendered at Papillion, Sarpy county places the responsibility upon the railroad company for not furnishing sufficient safeguards as well as upon the freight train crew for failure to properly inspect the train register at South Omaha.

ARREST PREACHER FOR GIRL'S DEATH

Rev. Clarence Richeson Accused of Murder of Miss Avis Linnell.

BOUGHT CYANIDE OF POTASSIUM

Boston, Oct. 21.—The Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson, formerly a student at William Jewell college, Liberty, Mo., was arrested charged with murder in the first degree for the death of Miss Avis Linnell, a pretty music student and choir singer. Miss Linnell died in her room in the Young Women's Christian Association of cyanide of potassium poisoning.

The arrest of the Rev. Mr. Richeson was made at the home of Moses G. Edmands, a wealthy real estate operator, whose daughter, Violet, was to be married to Richeson October 31. The pastor sought a refuge in the Edmands home after the death of Miss Linnell and he has remained there ever since, except for a brief interval. He was in bed when arrested.

The police have information, given to them by William Hahn, a druggist at Newton Centre, who knows the Rev. Mr. Richeson well, that the poison was bought from him by the Rev. Mr. Richeson on October 10, the day before the druggist received an invitation to the coming wedding.

With the Rev. Mr. Richeson under arrest and the purchasing of the poison put up to him to the satisfaction of the police, the detectives renewed their efforts to identify the man with whom Avis Linnell took dinner in the late afternoon or evening of the day she was killed. It is believed that Avis Linnell received the poison from a man friend in the belief that it was a drug that would relieve her of a trouble that had caused her much worry.

Mr. Edmands, the father of Miss Violet Edmands, for whose marriage to Mr. Richeson on October 31 cards had been issued has recalled the invitations. The Edmands family, however, maintains faith in Mr. Richeson.

The setting of October 31 as the date for a further hearing of Mr. Richeson developed a coincidence in the fact that the day is that on which he was to have been married. But neither the announcement of the date nor any other happening in connection with his arrest seemed to disturb the prisoner.

Police learned from a young woman in the Y. W. C. A. that when Mr. Richeson was notified by telephone of Miss Linnell's death he showed little interest, but asked:

"Did Miss Linnell say anything before she died?" The answer was that she did not.

After the president's address there will be papers by Prof. Edwin C. Hayes of the university and Dr. Graham Taylor of Chicago. An informal reception will follow. The conference will be in session until Tuesday night.

CHAPTER IV.

THE OBSTINATE TEMPLE.

"SEE here, Temple," said Craven, coming windily into the library, waving a sheet of foolscap. "Here's a little statement I've just prepared. Listen."

Burton Temple's brows went together in never so slight a spasm of weariness, but he said cheerfully enough:

"Fire ahead. I'll listen. Only, you see, you've got up so many 'little statements,' Craven."

"Hang it, man," exclaimed the lawyer. "One would think it was a matter of indifference with you whether you were proved innocent of this crime or not. That's one of the reasons public opinion is so against you. You're so apparently unconcerned about the whole affair. Why, you walk along, your head in the air, your chin out, saying to the world, 'Take a punch at it if you can,' and the next thing you'll know they'll beat you down and out."

In the whole ten years during which Craven had been Temple's friend and lawyer this Granger case had been the first matter over which they had differed. But, then, it was the first time that Temple had been personally attacked. He tried now to put this personal equation before his friend.

"You see, dear Craven," he said in explanation for his own apparent indifference, "I appreciate your statement which you wish to inflict on the long suffering public, but don't you think—don't you think it's just the little fact that your friend happens to be the victim of their suspicion which causes all this worry on your part? For example, presuming you were in my place, would you still endeavor to compromise, to explain?"

"Explain to 'em? I'd sooner see 'em"—

"Precisely," laughed Temple, leaning back in his chair—"precisely. You see, I'm right, old friend, and you're wrong. You admit you wouldn't do it yourself in your own case. Clearly and logically, what I must do is to wait till I get some tangible proof of my innocence. What's the use of trying to vindicate myself if the proof's lacking? This New York public is from Missouri, and I don't say a single word till I can make good. Somewhere among Brady's papers, I'll bet my life, there is a letter or a check strip or something. There always is something, and I'm counting on that young detective, Crane, whom I've got in Brady's office, to get it."

"Sure. That's all very well," agreed Craven. "But suppose Crane doesn't get any such proof, what then? Suppose you never do get proof? I tell you, Temple, your so called friends are beginning to disbelieve in you. The papers are offended because you refuse to talk. Now, be reasonable. Here's this little statement which I've prepared to be sent out over your signature." He opened the copy.

"Fire ahead," said Temple indulgently, bending down to pat Cato.

"'To the public,'" began Craven stoutly.

"Donkeyism No. 1," mentally commented the man opposite to him, slowly lighting a cigar.

"'In view of the widespread feeling against me regarding the Gotham Trust company-Granger case I wish to make a statement of the facts'"—

"Savors of a Sunday school appeal for funds for a pink midsummer picnic—eh, Cato?" interposed Temple, adding mentally, "Donkeyism No. 2."

—"'Cornelius Brady and myself are co-trustees of an estate. Mr. Brady wrongfully made use of part of those trust bonds, I by this act becoming equally responsible with him for making up the loss. At the time of the panic Mr. Brady asked the Gotham Trust company to certify a check to the amount of $700,000. This I refused to do, not feeling justified in making the trust company responsible for Brady's check. Thereupon Brady went to Robert Granger, the cashier, and prevailed upon him to certify the check.'"

"Fishy, fishy, fishy!" ejaculated Temple, puffing leisurely at his cigar.

"'Since the trial and conviction of Granger,'" pursued Craven unmovedly "'it has become known that Brady, my co-trustee, used that check to make good his unlawful appropriation of the fund of which he and I are trustees. Naturally it appeared that I profited equally with Brady in the use to which the check was put. It is because of my apparent profit that I am supposed to have given the order to Granger'"—

"Weak—weak as dishwater!" cried Temple, springing up. "Craven, it's no good, I tell you. Caught myself believing myself a thief while you read it. It's futile to explain—hopelessly futile—till we can present some proof that Granger did of his own volition certify that check. Oh, I'll trust in Crane a little longer."

There was silence in the room for a few moments, while Temple smoked, Craven tugged at his gray mustache in a quandary, and Cato slept.

"What did you say?" asked Craven anxiously, looking over his glasses.

"I did not say."

"I want you to. Confound it, you don't take life seriously enough."

"You have perhaps observed that I don't make the mistake of doing so. In some matters I hardly think I am grown up. I am, for example, quite content to remain a boy so far as the muddles of life are concerned, continuing with youthful cheerfulness to translate de profundis clamavi into 'Out of the depths I have clams,' eh, Craven?—just as I did when I held the fort at the foot of the lowest form in Latin."

"You're too pigheadedly brazen in your play with public opinion, that's what you are, my boy," cried Craven hotly. "Public opinion has already convicted you."

"So?" said Temple serenely, lifting his eyebrows in that quizzical way of his. "Public opinion is very absurd. I protest against it. Take one thoroughly ignorant man. Who regards his opinion or considers his judgments as vital? Put together all the thoroughly ignorant men in the republic, and we are told that the sum of their stupidity is to be reverenced, regarded with awe"—

"The voice of the people," broke in Craven, "is"—

"Diaboli!" finished his client. "The public of today has gone mad with a muckrake in its hands; it's too irrationally ready to believe that those in high places"—

Temple's eye had caught the portrait of his mother over the mantel. His mood suddenly veered to downright seriousness.

"Craven, I offered Crane $10,000 to get some tangible proof from Brady's office. But I'd give a million. I'd give every cent I've got to stand clear and be recognized as honest. Why, I tell you, it's hell! I tell you I've worked, worked all my life, worked hard to build up my career on honest, clean lines. You know it. I've turned my back to crooked ways when they were easily accessible, and now—I'm accused of being a thief, the dirtiest sort of a thief, the man who shoulders his crime on another." The muscles of his mouth twitched a bit; he felt his control slipping away, so he turned abruptly on his heel and averted his face.

The grim lawyer crossed over to lay his hand with almost a woman's tenderness on the big shoulder of his friend, and his voice broke with a suspicion of huskiness as he muttered:

When Temple spoke again it was in his customary even tone:

"Craven, it seems to me that if Granger certified that check he didn't do it for mere love. Must have received something in return, eh?"

"Something in return?" said the lawyer dryly. "Sure, and a big something at that. It was worth it."

"What do you suppose he did it with, then?"

The lawyer shrugged his shoulders.

"The papers said he had a wife, I remember. Ever see her?"

"Never did," said Craven laconically.

"Suppose she's extravagant?"

"Superfluous question," grunted Craven. "They all are." Craven was sixty and a bachelor by instinct, one might even say by heredity, for his father had succeeded in escaping matrimony until close upon fifty-two.

Temple smiled indulgently and began elaborating his new idea. "It has occurred to me that if we could establish that Granger has been spending or investing large sums of money lately it would help our cause. That's why I mentioned his wife."

Before he vouchsafed to reply the cynical old lawyer walked across the room and helped himself to a peg of brandy and soda.

"Your premise is all right, Temple," he sneered, "but your conclusion is sappy, asinine. We'll try to find out if he spent money, sure. But we won't waste time in trying to find out if he spent it on his wife. The great trouble with you is that you're romantic."

Temple nodded comprehensively, the odd, quizzical, boyish uplift coming to his eyebrows again notwithstanding.

"Dare say you're right," said he simply.

"Of course it was a noble and high minded supposition on your part," grinned the bachelor, "and, having the marriage germ in your system, it was to be expected. You haven't a wife, so you naturally fancy the money would be spent on one. Granger has a wife. He naturally spends it on somebody else. Each man turns to the thing he doesn't possess."

Temple nodded again. "Well, when you go into town on Monday, get the still hunt started for the woman, will you, old man?"

"Sure, you bet your life. But," he called back over his shoulder, as he was leaving the room, "we won't hunt for her in Westfield, N. J., where Granger's home is; we'll hunt for her in West Forty-third street, New York."

"And this wife of Granger's," murmured Temple, left to himself, "I suppose she has faith in him; they all have. I dare say it's she who's working behind this plan to get his pardon; doubtless she's somewhere now, praying for him, waiting for him to come back to her vindicated, an honest man. And I? Well, I'm fighting to prove his conviction just, and there you are! Queer little muddle it is, after all, this play of life. I wonder sometimes if the great Eye mustn't get tired of it and the great Ear wearied of it. I wonder"—

* * * * * * *

From the first days of his association with the Gotham Trust company in an inconsequential capacity to the later days when he had risen to its presidency, allies and rivals had found in Burton Temple a personal humility that was charming, but underneath it fighting qualities that were terrible. He had the gentleness of a lamb and the strength of a lion.

Immediately Anna Granger had recognized the second of these qualities. Now, after some weeks of daily work with him, in the gradual unveiling of the man's personality, she was coming to a sense of the first. Her feelings and judgments about her host were beginning to pulse through her mind with an energy that she seemed powerless to arrest. They did not make her happy; far from it, but they quickened and intensified all the acts of thinking and living.

Usually, however, she succeeded in recapturing herself, in beating back the thoughts which, like troops on a doubtful field, appeared to be carrying her into the ambushes and strongholds of an enemy; she was impatient and scornful of them.

As to Temple himself, maybe he didn't know it, but already he was in the way to fall as completely in love with his new secretary as Amadis of Gaul or Aucassin of Beaucaire or any other hero of romance you may choose to mention. Even in the first few days he had found himself thinking more of her in a personal way than he had ever thought of any woman. He was not the fashion of man to whom women in general appealed—not that he was wanting in a certain admiration for them or in reverence, but his early life had been devoted to his mother and to his career, so that during the days when a man usually chooses a wife Temple had been too occupied to seek for one. Later—well, somehow he had not met with any one who had quickened the romance that was in him.

For at heart this cool, collected man of finance was romantic. He was more; he was an idealist. He was the sort of man who would husband to his original mate or none.

Unconsciously he made constant little discoveries in Anna—most charming yields of new regions of intelligence, new points of humor, unexpected fountains of emotion, unfathomable depths of womanliness. Her eyes and her hair pleased him; her slim, firm, delicate hands— No; he repudiated that. It was herself—her inimitable self.

And as he felt the excellencies and beauties of her nature more and more he felt the absorbing power of his own manhood to make them his own. She bloomed for him the flower of fancies, but the seeds lay in his own heart; she seemed an exhalation from his own hidden sources. His mother possessed the same ladyhood. At Anna's age his own mother must have been like her, he thought, the stirrer in a man of noble passions, the allayer of others. Life partnership with such women promised not gratifications merely, but satisfactions.

Life partnership and love! They were thoughts now neither for noon nor her presence. With a man like Burton Temple everything had its time and place. He must clear his good name first. That was the imperative duty on hand.

As the result of the gradual recognition of the state of his own feelings, there had come about increased activity in his work against Granger. The reward to Crane, should he succeed in securing some scrap of evidence from Brady, had been raised to $25,000. The detective bureau had been offered a fabulous sum for proof that Granger had invested any large amount of money; that he had been a big purchaser of stock in any company, or that he was tangled up with some woman besides his wife. No means that a daring, shrewd fighter could use had been overlooked.

And so, all unconsciously—oh, the little pathetic game of human cross purposes at which fate, the flinty hearted, must smile—Anna Granger had become at once her husband's champion and foe. She, for tenderness toward him, was here in Temple's house, fighting desperately to find some evidence that would clear him. Temple, for the vindicated honor which he hoped to lay at his lady's feet, was fighting with equal desperation to keep in prison as a branded thief the man whom he had sent there.

But, as yet, the fight had fetched nothing to either of them.
